

Honors in France for Our Soldier Dead

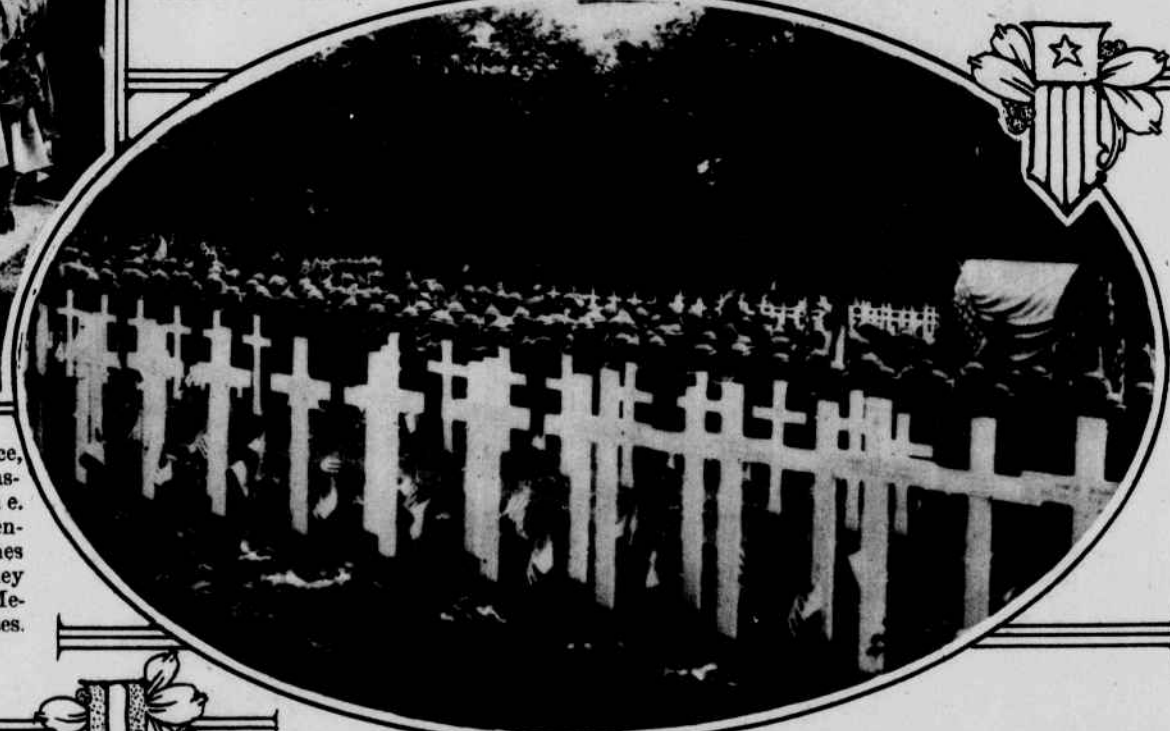

Marshal Petain of the French Army delivering his address in tribute to America's heroic dead at the Memorial Day exercises in the American military cemetery at Suresnes, near Paris.

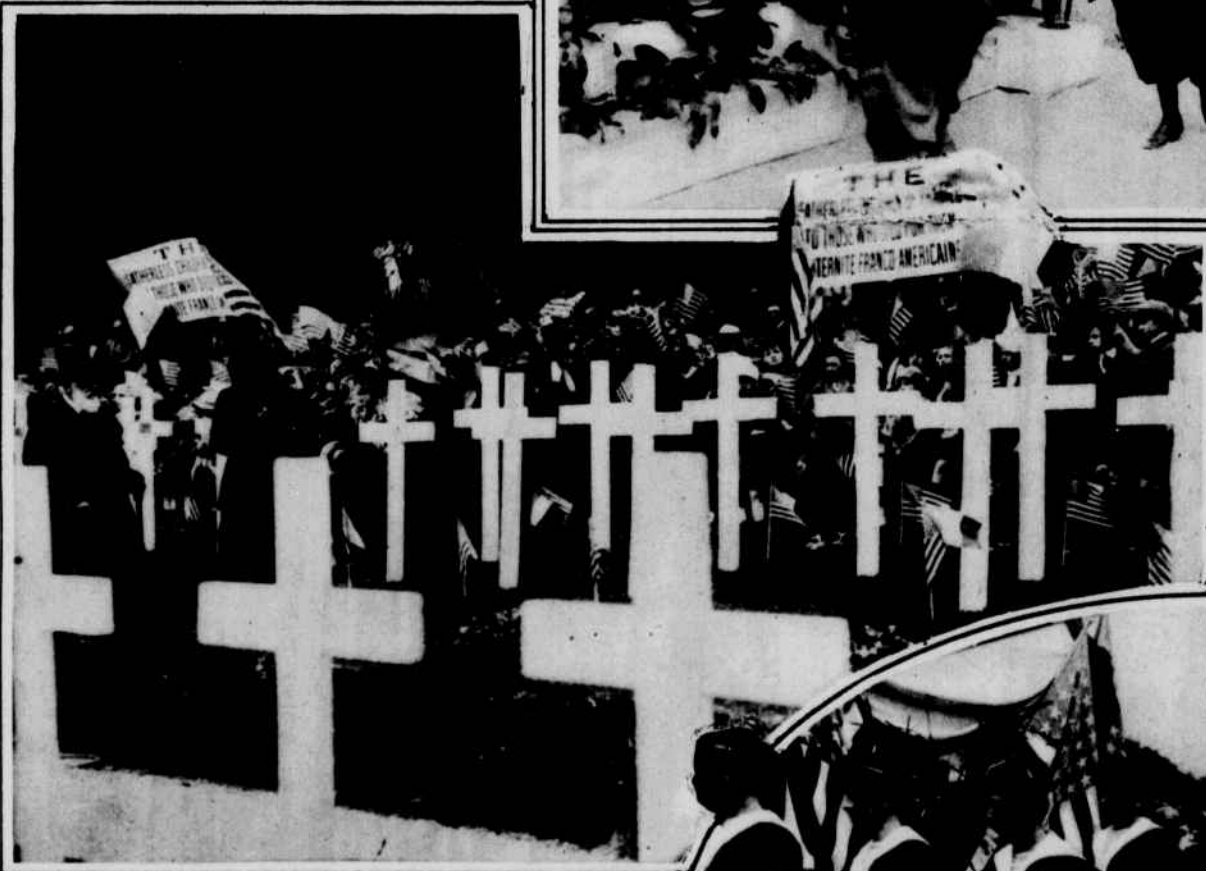

Mme. Millerand, wife of the French President, laying a wreath on the cenotaph in Suresnes Cemetery, scene of the principal Memorial Day ceremonies in which France joined the United States in honoring our soldier dead. Similar exercises were held in many other centres in France.

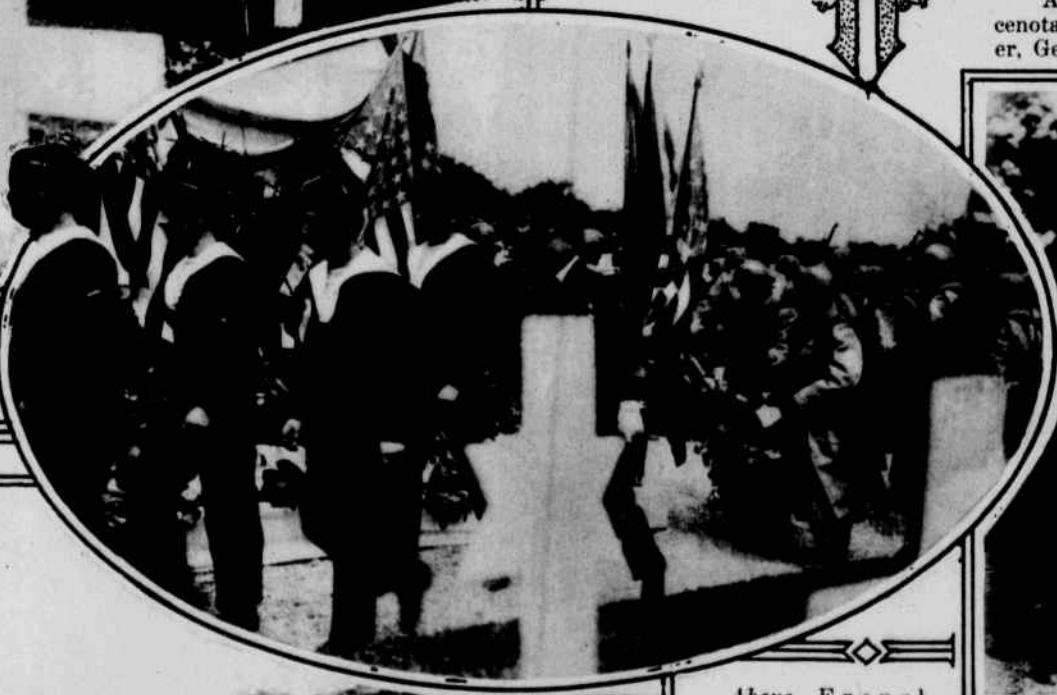

Hugh C. Wallace, the American Ambassador, and Mme. Millerand at the cenotaph in Suresnes Cemetery, where they took part in the Memorial Day exercises.

American troops, a composite battalion from the Rhine Army, surrounding the cenotaph in Suresnes Cemetery during the Memorial Day exercises. Their commander, Gen. Henry T. Allen, delivered the chief oration.

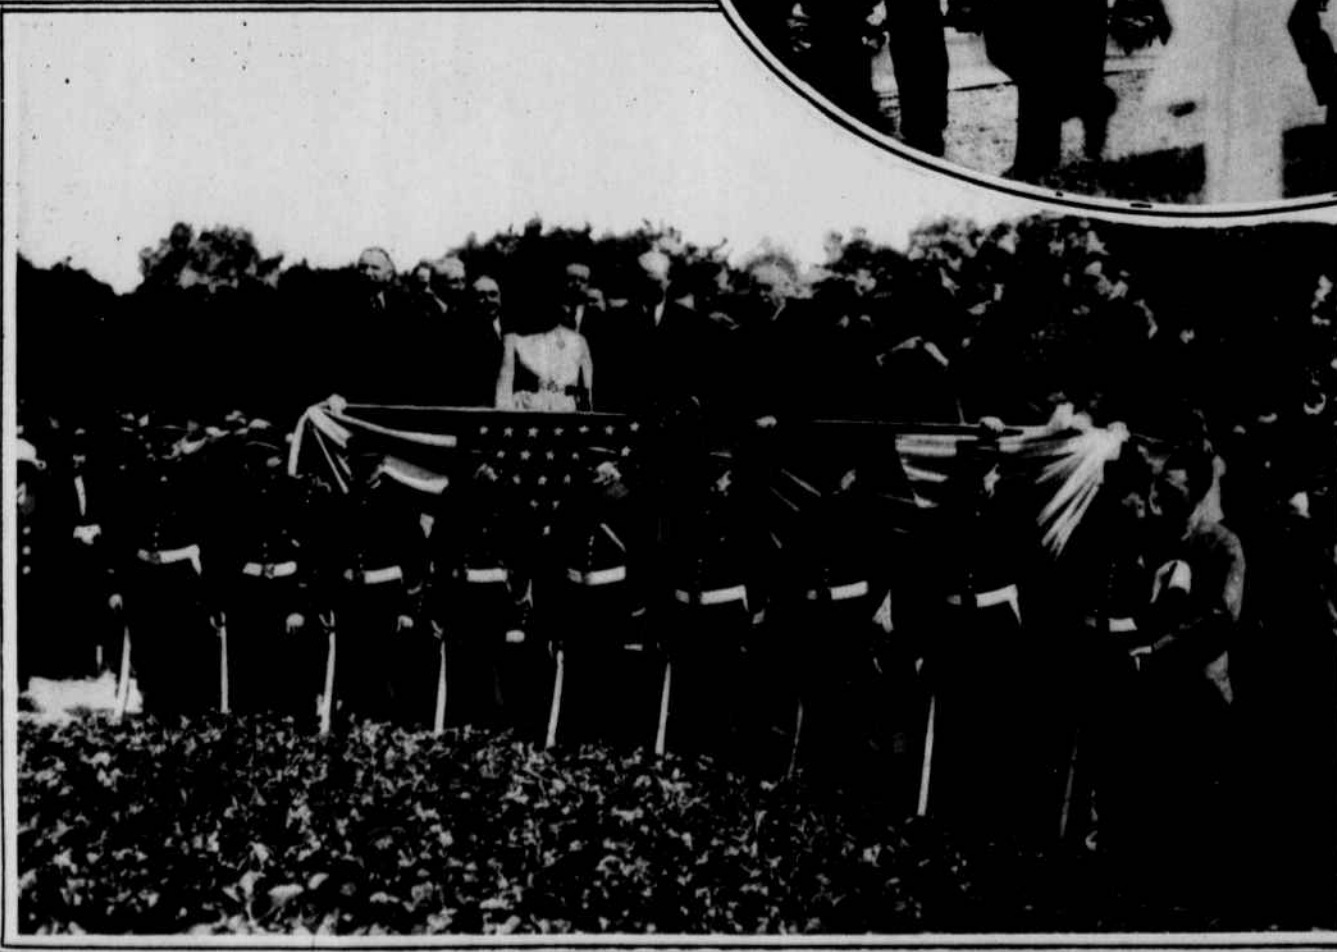

Hundreds of the fatherless children of France took part in the Memorial Day honors to America's soldier dead. Picture shows a group of them at Suresnes Cemetery.

Above—French sailors and soldiers laying wreaths on the cenotaph at Suresnes on Memorial Day

Marshal Petain saluting the American colors and the flag of the American Legion, part of the Memorial Day exercises

The official stand where French and American dignitaries joined in paying tribute to our dead heroes in France. The picture shows the Rev. C. W. Goodrich offering prayer.

Photos Paris Bureau, The New York Herald.

At right—Fatherless children of France placing flags and wreaths on graves of our dead. More than 40,000 American graves in various parts of France were decorated on Memorial Day.

